Integrating technology and patient-centered care

In "The Integrated Office," local dentist Dr. Scott LaClair shares his experiences in building a thriving practice, along with his three favorite rants:

- Technology is a means, not an end
- CEREC – you are looking at it all wrong
- Dentistry – it's a team sport, and you aren't captain!

According to Dr. LaClair, "The administration of care in dentistry as a whole is mismanaged. A dentist-centric approach to care – where all decisions and actions are doctor-driven – limits efficiency. Mastering a team approach in a patient-centric practice requires systems, and to limit failures in these systems we must lean on technology to quiet the noise and precipitate productivity."

Join us for an energetic, thought-provoking presentation on how you can incorporate technology into your practice to ensure the best of patient care.
